

I have enjoyed not being interrupted at home since Wisconsin's no call list was implemented. Why waste my time and the telemarketer since if I did not initiate the call, I do not want to hear about the great offers available to me. I should not have to install caller ID and then interrupt what I am doing to either check the number or answer the call to find out the phone company I left because I was not happy with them (or some similar salesperson) wants my business. What happened to the sanctity of my home?
